This case review describes ultrasonography findings associated with cesarean scar pregnancy (CSP), which are necessary to allow prompt diagnosis and therapy. CSP is defined as a gestational sac that invaded into the defect of myometrium at the hysterotomy site from pervious cesarean delivery. Placenta accreta spectrum could be induced by CSP.